PRESENTED TO THE:

5th Danube eRegion Conference – DeRC 2015:

Cross-border eSolutions & eServices Prototypes Development

<http://eregion.eu/conferences/derc-2015/derc2015-program>

Ljubljana, September 22, 2015

WELCOME TO THE CROSS-BORDER ECOLLABORATION!

To the eRegions development, the Digital Single Market Strategy for Europe (published by the European Commission on May 6, 2015) is very important for several reasons. One, within the Digital Single Market, the eRegions will develop faster. Two, only after the eRegions are digital in reality, the EU Digital Single Market can be materialized. Three, more competitive as an eRegion is, more competitive the EU Market as a whole will be. Four, a joint EU strategy is urgently needed since no single country, no single region, no single industry can make it happen.

From another perspective, it is about Europe in the EU regions. It is important to know how local and regional authorities in 28 Member States serve the cause of European integration and act as “ambassadors of Europe” on the ground.

The Inter-Municipality Initiative: Cross-border eCollaboration in the Danube eRegion has been under way since February 2011. A major focus of the initiative is to encourage organizations having interest in any aspect of cross-border eBusiness in the region to engage in a joint Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) based prototype development. A prototype is the beginning of an action leading to a possible joint pilot. The pilot may be a core of an EU project proposal of an eSolution, or an eService development solving a problem shared by the organization in at least three countries. In that spirit the eMunicipalities Without Borders Mayors Consortium has been established by a group of the municipality mayors on June 30, 2015.

The municipalities in the Consortium are planning to jointly develop a common website (in English language) as a prototype. It will allow access to data on the organizations and activities in each municipality being of interest to business, visitors, and tourists. It will provide the links to small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) on a territory of the municipality which are encouraged to engage in a cross-border eBusiness using latest eTechnologies. All transactions of a business process are expected to be e-based: inquiry, catalog, purchase order, order confirmation, delivery note, invoice, payment. The ICT providers are encouraged to look for low-cost, easy-to-use holistic eServices in order to assist numerous SMEs to engage in a cross-border eBusiness.

I am looking forward to your active engagement in the eMunicipality Without Borders eCollaboration!

HISTORY

The oldest Slovenian mining town lies in the basin at the confluence of the Idrijca and the Nikova. Its development is closely connected to the discovery of mercury in 1490 and the development of the mine known as the second largest mercury mine in the world. 107,000 tons of mercury which equals 13 per cent of the world mercury production have been produced in the mine in Idrija. Since 1977 the mining has been gradually reduced and the mine closed. In the town itself many buildings still bear witness of the rich economic and cultural past of this place and also of the life style of the local population. The rich heritage of the mine, which, for economic reasons, knit many bonds with other mines throughout the world such as Almaden in Spain. On 30 June, 2012 in Saint Petersburg, UNESCO's World Heritage Committee decided to include Idrija's mercury mine along with the mine in Spain's Almaden on its world heritage list.

The most known unique monuments to the technological heritage in municipality:
 “Kamšt” water wheel – the pit water pump with its largest preserved wooden drive wheel in Europe;
 “Klavže” water barriers – special watercourse barriers for floating timber, also called the Slovenian pyramids;
 the Frančiška shaft – the oldest preserved structure of the Idrija mine, opened up back in 1792, with its exhibition of mining machines and equipment;
 Antonijev rov – a pit gallery arranged for visitors in the oldest part of the mine, with an entrance excavation dating back to 1500; Church of the Holy Trinity – originally a wooden chapel on the site of the legendary first extraction of mercury, it has been authentically restored;
 miner’s house – this residential building from the 18th century is an example of the dwellings typical of the Idrija mining community;
 Gewerkenegg castle - The castle was built in the first half of the 16th century as the administrative building of the Idrija Mercury Mine – the second largest mercury mine in the world;
 Magazin – the mine granary - This stupendous Theresian building was used for storing and giving out grain to miners till 1912. It is now a monument of national significance;
 “Rake” water channel - Pit water constantly disturbed the mining, so pumping systems had to be constructed to enable pumping the pit water out;
 The theatre building - The theatre was built at the same time as the granary building and is known as the oldest built theatre building in Slovenia;
 Town hall 1898 - It is a representative Secession administrative palace – the town hall;
 Slovenija Partisan Printing Shop - Slovenija Partisan Printing Shop was the largest and technically best equipped partisan printing shop in the region of Primorska. It is located on a nearly inaccessible slope under the plateau of Vojsko and operated from September 1944 till May 1945;
 Bolnica Pavla – Pavla Partisan Hospital - Only the monuments at Hudo polje in Mrzla Rupa and at one of its locations at Krekovše remind us of the whereabouts and activities of this partisan hospital;
 Lace School Idrija - Lace School Idrija was established in 1876 following the decree of the then imperial royal authority in Vienna and has since then operated continuously. In 1976 it became part of the Jurij Vega Grammar School;
 Idrija Lace - Idrija is home to the famous bobbin lace – Idrija Lace. When exactly and how the lacemaking in Idrija started, is unknown. It is presumed that the knowledge of this craft was either brought from the German or the Czech provinces more than three hundred years ago;
 The Church of sv. Trojica (Holy Trinity) - Holy Trinity, the oldest church in Idrija, is situated on the spot where, according to tradition, a legendary ‘tub maker’ first noticed the native mercury in 1490.

HISTORY:

Škofja Loka was mentioned in 973 as Lonca (referring to Stara Loka) (and as Lonka in 1160, Lok in 1192–97, Scofolotti in 1293, and Scofioloco in 1295, among other names). The name literally means 'bishop's (wet) meadow', referring to its ownership by the Bishops of Freising.

In 973, the lordship of Škofja Loka was granted by Emperor Otto II to the Bishops of Freising, and for the next one thousand years the history of the town was tied to that of the distant ecclesiastical principality. [A castle and tower were built above the town for defense purposes and later became the residence of the bishop's governor. In the 11th or 12th century. Emperor Otto III granted the bishops the right to mint coinage and collect tolls. Škofja Loka was first mentioned as having market rights in 1248, and having town rights in 1274.

Škofja Loka was walled in the 14th century. In 1457, Duke Jan Vitovec entered and burned the town. The town was attacked by the Ottomans in 1476. The town also suffered from plague and fires during this time. Peasant revolts occurred in Škofja Loka in 1488, 1492, and 1515. Škofja Loka was destroyed by an earthquake in 1511 but soon rebuilt through the efforts of Bishop Phillip. Lutheranism was established in Škofja Loka in 1526. Laws were passed against the new religion, and a Counter-Reformation committee was convened at the castle in 1601, resulting in the burning of Protestant books.

Much of the town was damaged by fires in 1660 and 1698. The defensive walls gradually became obsolete and were mostly removed together with the town gates in 1789. In 1803 the Prince-Bishopric of Freising was mediatised during the German Mediatisation and the enclave of Škofja Loka was annexed to the Austrian duchy of Carniola. Škofja Loka was the first town in Carniola to receive electric lights, even before the earthquake of 1895.

HISTORY

The earliest relics of the past found in the area of the town are from the Roman era, Lenti first appears in written documents in 1237, though it was called Nemith in those days. However, the marshland fortification, built in the early 13th Century on islands in the flood plain of the Kerka River in the neighbourhood of the settlement, had much more significance as it was regarded as impregnable. King Béla IV seized the area from the then land-owner Buzád, so that, in 1275, the place was already known as the king's hunting seat. The place became a market town in 1381. The fortress of Lenti was later besieged by the Turks on several occasions.

The Zalaegerszeg – Lenti – Csáktornya railway line, completed in 1890, brought remarkable economic growth to the town. The new border of Hungary defined by the Trianon Treaty was right next to Lenti which left Alsólendva, the chief town of the district, in the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. Therefore Lenti needed to overtake the governance of the area. The town became the chief town of the district in 1925, though, owing to the lack of the necessary institutions it was unable to fulfil the tasks of an administrative centre in a satisfactory manner until 1950. Industrialisation in the town started in the 1920s. In 1922 the Kerkavölgyi Faipari Rt sawmill was established which was the biggest company of the region in those days. In 1923 a factory making coffee substitute was built. In 1924 a technical school, in 1928 a nursery school, in 1933 a higher elementary school and in 1938 a Catholic church school with four classrooms were opened in Lenti, which is by now the chief town of the district. After the Second World War Lenti did not see any major development until the 1960s when, based on a decision of county level, the authorities sought to establish here the third industrial centre of Zala county. On January 1, 1979 Lenti was given the status of a town and at the same time three communities, Bárszentmihályfa, Lentikápolna and Máhomfa were attached to it and the town has developed rapidly since then.

VISION

Udine is committed to become »the city for the quality of life«.

Plenty of initiatives and actions are organized by the municipality to promote the quality of life in a holistic way:

- having been the leading city of the “Healthy Ageing Sub-Network” within the W.H.O. Healthy Cities Network for several years, Udine is active both at European and international level on the theme of Healthy and Active Ageing,
- the city is involved in many projects focused on the energy efficiency (member of “Energy cities” and of “Covenant of Mayors” networks), and one of the beneficiary of the regional project “ENERGOV_FVG - Smart Integrated management of distributed generation based on renewable sources and innovative storage solutions”,
- the Municipality launched in the last few years many initiatives based on the new tools offered by ICT technologies and Web 2.0 like ePart (a web solution that facilitates the management of urban problems, allowing citizens to interact with the public Administration by indicating inconveniences and disruptions) and other initiatives of eGovernment for public services, mainly targeted to businesses.

HISTORY

The first written records of the city date back to the 11th of June 983 when the Emperor Otto II confirmed his possession of the castle of Udene to the Patriarch of Aquileia. Since that time, Udine followed the fate of its territory: in 1077 it became part of the Patriarchal State of Friuli, and it was the Patriarch Bertoldo di Andechs (1218-1251) who favored the development of Udine as a centre for trade and finance by creating a tax-free market there.

In 1420 Udine came under the domination of the Republic of Venice for a long period and came into conflict more than once with the Germanic emperors over the possession of the territory. On the 27th of February 1511, the city exploded into a violent civil war between families and feudal lords loyal to Venice and those siding with the Germans.

After the War of Gradisca (1615-1617), famines and epidemics of the plague broke out in Udine and the province, but within the next couple decades the situation improved and the city fully assumed the role of capital of the "Little Nation" of Friuli.

The fall of the Republic of Venice in 1797 at the hands of Napoleon and the French provoked a period of instability at the end of which, in 1815, the province of Udine became part of the Lombard-Venetian Kingdom under the rule of the emperors of the House of Austria. In 1866, at the end of the unification campaigns, Udine was annexed by the Kingdom of Italy.

During World War I Udine became the seat of the supreme command of the war operation of the Italian army, until 1917 when it was occupied by enemy troops after the Battle of Caporetto.

When World War II broke out Udine came under the direct administration of the 3rd Reich after the 8th of September 1943, and was occupied until April 1945.
