Ad AI 3:

Five academic environments (Slovenia, Austria, Italy, Canada and USA) dealing with the status of professors emeriti were presented to the participants of the meeting. The papers and PPT presentation in annexes of the minutes are reachable on the web (Professors Emeriti Network, http://eregion.eu/slovenia-professors-emeriti/), written by Lucija Čok, Heinrich Mayr, Luigi Campanella, Carole-Lynne Le Navenc, and Gregory M. Sadlek, enlarge the presentations of single academic reality. The formal and social status of professors emeriti in Europe varies widely. It reflects cultural and traditional attitudes towards older people in general. Older universities with tradition respect this status more and mainly provide a "soft" transition from working life to full retirement. This is basically a cultural attitude of academia towards older people. However, it is more typical of northern and central European universities. In the South, the attitude towards older professors is much more ruthless, especially in the newly established universities without academic tradition.

Knowledge market inclusion of retired researchers and professor emeriti in Slovenia depends on individual engagement and possibilities. Often their silent presence is required as the operative staff of research institution and universities are not interested in their cooperation, or the legal aspect of their cooperation is limited. However, their engagement in civil society is desired, their products are appreciated. The Austrian and the Italian reality are similar the Slovene one. The Canadian and American experiences can give examples of good practice. What can be done on more transparency of their contribution to public goodness? The comparative discussion among countries and universities on legal, informal and ethical aspects of professor emeriti research and education activities could give a response.

Discussion and conclusions

After a discussion on presented issues, remarks and ideas were exposed on what European Association of Professors Emeriti - EAPE can do in this regard.

Aiming to put some efforts on exploring the possibilities of the emeriti professors in the EAPE and to contribute in public goodness, social and intergenerational cooperation the participants agree to act on:

- discussions in this EAPE group to promote best practices from European universities regarding the status emeriti professors that can be implemented.
- "minimal" standards and approaches that all universities can share as a first step. In the best case even recommend the European Commission to develop appropriate recommendations for emeriti professors and researchers in their research programs.
- Incentive EAPE to prepare a memorandum on Contribution of Professors Emeriti and Retired Researchers in Public Goodness.

The next meeting of the network will be organized on September 29th, 2021. The program is published at <http://eregion.eu/slovenia-professors-emeriti/>:
